“ I met Chrissy through my husband Jermaine. We connected on Facebook and then when she got sick again I went to visit her in the hospital. I remember her saying she felt like we knew each other forever. In our short friendship she made me feel loved and she was so happy that my husband found a girl as she would call me. I am going to miss her she was sooooo sweet and she definitely touched my life. Rest easy love.

“ I met Chrissy long ago, when I was seeing a friend of hers. Nancy and I used to go rollerskating, and Chrissy always joined us. Whether we were going to Sholes on Post Road, or Riverdale, we always had a good time. Later in life, I found out that she was also my sons aunt. That's when we reconnected, and began our friendship again. Chrissy, it makes me sad to know that you are no longer here, but at the same time, your suffering is finally over, and you are rejoicing in the heavens with your family, and with Jesus. I don't know how much longer I have here, but I do know that I will see you again, one day soon, enough. Til then, watch over those you care about, and save a place for me, because I am bringing coffee... Love Ya kiddo... Til we meet again...

“ I've known Chris for a long time. As our children grew up and moved out, we would have girls night. Playing games (phase 10, Apple's to apples but, don't pull out scrabble) and laughing til we peed ourselves. Her smile was contagious. Her friendship was true. Chris was sarcastic and spoke the truth. That's why we were so close. No pulling teeth. Straight to the point. Chris would call me and say, "Hey Kel wanna go for a ride"? Well of course! Where are we going?

Loyalty like ours don't exist like this anymore. Friends are hard to find especially the ones who know you, even when you don't know yourself sometimes.
