“ Mom

There has not been a day that you have not been on my mind. I imagine you with me as you wrap your wings around me holding me in your safety. And within that safety you make me stronger than I could ever could be on my own.

I told you once that the things we go through in life make us who we are, that we shouldn't dismiss the unpleasant, distasteful, or ugly things that are brought upon us, that we grow and learn from them. Well you took all of those things, and you became the strong, independent, stubborn woman we all knew and loved. We may not have liked certain ways you looked at things or spoke to people but those were of your opinion and we still accepted you for who you were. You had a wisdom, a charm and beauty all your own and we will miss you, your smile and your strength.

PS

You could have sent some kind of warning when you called Troll home to you!

*Love always and forever your daughter
BillieRose*
